

The 17th Annual Great Plains Infectious Disease Meeting

We are pleased to host the 17th Great Plains Infectious Disease (GPID) annual meeting which was originally developed to promote collaborations in the Great Plains region and to create a platform for networking among researchers. It continues to do so by promoting student, postdoc and young faculty's research by hosting a poster presentation and providing a platform for faculty, especially those new to the region, to give oral presentations that provide an outline of their research programs and promote new collaborative interactions. This year, we are proud to host more than 125 participants from across the region with 47 posters submitted for presentation. We welcome participants from regional academic programs, industry, private firms, nonprofits, contract research organizations and government. This meeting has always been successful due to the generosity of our academic sponsors and selected vendors, which are mentioned below.

Thank you all for attending!

Wendy and Bill Picking - University of Kansas

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Generous academic and industrial sponsors have contributed greatly to the success of these meetings. Many thanks to all of our 2018 GPID supporters!

